

e i d o s e i d o

s

In this second volume of philosophical reflections on the world of work, the author offers a challenging and probing reading of labour administration and its corollary function of inspection. The topic has returned to the forefront of national and international debates, especially in the light of the continuous changes occurred and still occurring in the labour market, also as a consequence of the global financial and economic crisis. In this light, the function of administration – as caring and minding power – comes to the fore. Thus, the significance and scope of labour administration increase, also pointing to the value and function of labour administration as a vital means to promoting overall good governance.

Liberato Santoro-Brienza, born and educated in Italy, taught philosophy in University College Dublin from 1970 to 2001 and, as visiting professor, in other academic institutions in Ireland, Italy, Europe, the USA, Australia and New Zealand. Fellow at the University of Melbourne. Honorary Research Associate, Philosophy Department, the University of Auckland. Professor of Philosophy at the Royal Hibernian Academy. Registered psychotherapist.

€ 8,00

Liberato Santoro-Brienza A Philosophical Reading of Labour Administration

2
0
1
0

Liberato Santoro-Brienza

A Philosophical Reading of Labour Administration

Preface by

Gianni Arrigo and Giuseppe Casale

2
0
1
0